Yuva Saathi

National Museum announces the launch of a new Programme -Yuva Saathi, Young Visitor Programme, dedicated to school children. Yuva Saathi is a pioneering effort aimed at engaging young minds in a dialogue with the objects of National Museum with the help of Young Volunteer guides, Yuva Saathi.

National Museum

National Museum houses a rich collection of Indian and foreign origin. The collection consists of varied art objects such as sculptures, paintings, coins, textiles, decorative arts, arms and armour and represents tribal life. These objects have direct and representational linkages with the school curriculum.

Yuva Saathis are graduate students from colleges of Delhi trained specifically to guide children in the National Museum. It is for the first time that such a programme exclusively for children is being launched in an Indian museum. The Volunteers will guide school groups on a special trail through the museum, combining its masterpieces and unusual objects, for fun filled and informative experience for all young visitors. MUSEUM TRAIL

An informative trail covering masterpieces of National Museum has been designed for young children. The trail has stops in the museum that children will benefit from and enjoy.

Guided tours

Guided tours are given by Young Volunteers, of select objects, that will give a glimpse of the entire museum.

PLAN YOUR VISIT

Before your visit

Have a look at the National Museum website to get information about its history and collections.

<http://www.nationalmuseumindia.gov.in/index.asp>

During your visit

Young visitors can record observations, experiences and ideas. Students can collect information by looking at labels of art objects and understand their contexts using activity sheets.

After your visit

Teachers may further enhance the curriculum by developing lesson plans based on their museum experience.
